

USC ANNEBERG

SCHOOL FOR COMMUNICATION

Would you like to teach a course at a great school?

The Annenberg School for Communication at the University of Southern California seeks a small number of highly qualified adjunct faculty to supplement the instruction offered by our talented full-time faculty.

Candidates with specific experience and scholarship are sought in communication management, entertainment communication, print journalism, broadcast journalism, online journalism, advertising and strategic public relations.

Requirements for consideration include an M.A. degree in a related field. Ph.D. is preferred. Previous teaching experience is desirable. For some courses, outstanding professional experience may be substituted for academic credentials.

The USC Annenberg School for Communication is among the nation's leading institutions devoted to the study of communication, journalism and public relations. With an enrollment of 1,700 undergraduate and graduate students, USC Annenberg offers B.A., M.A., and Ph.D. degrees. Multidisciplinary and international in scope but focused and practical in application, USC Annenberg scholars, both students and faculty, are defining these fields for the 21st century and beyond.

The University of Southern California is proudly pluralistic and firmly committed to providing equal opportunity for outstanding men and women of every race, creed and background.
